

REJECTED
BY eHARMONY

Was it my outtie? We don't know why eHarmony has rejected over a million people looking for love. At Chemistry.com, it's not for us to decide who should be allowed in a meaningful relationship. We welcome innies, outties, and everyone in between. See what our chemistry-inspired matches can do for you. Your first five are free. Visit Chemistry.com today.

NEW!

chemistry.com™
COME AS YOU ARE

 REJECTED
BY eHARMONY

Was it my love for Buddha? If you've been let down by eHarmony, don't feel bad. Millions of people have been. Why? Your guess is as good as ours. At Chemistry.com, we don't have an agenda. Come as you are. And see what our chemistry-inspired matches can do for you. Your first five are free. Visit Chemistry.com today.

NEW!

chemistry.com™
COME AS YOU ARE

 REJECTED
BY eHARMONY

Was it my scar? We don't know exactly why eHarmony has rejected over a million people looking for love. At Chemistry.com, those diverse, keep-you-on-your-toes people are just who we're looking for. The ones you'd actually want to share a life—and a bed—with. See what our chemistry-inspired matches can do for you. Your first five are free. Visit Chemistry.com today.

NEW!

chemistry.com™
COME AS YOU ARE

 REJECTED
BY eHARMONY

Was it my bangs? eHarmony didn't reject you because of your hair. It's because you're gay. Harsh, right? They've also rejected over a million people for reasons we don't understand. Chemistry.com doesn't have an agenda. You can come as you are. And see what our chemistry-inspired matches can do for you. Your first five are free. Visit Chemistry.com today.

NEW!
chemistry.com™
COME AS YOU ARE